

What If...

What if you live in a simulated universe whose boundaries represent space/time?

What if the simulation is the product of a Consciousness outside of space/time?

What if your consciousness is a limited aspect of this nonlocal Consciousness?

What if your consciousness is broadcast through your avatar in the simulation?

What if identification with your avatar blinds you to your origin in Consciousness?

What if you are one of many holographic projections into a holographic universe?

What if the thoughts in your mind are programmed by Consciousness?

What if the memories in your mind are programmed by Consciousness?

What if all of your perceived experience exists only in the present moment?

What if the present moment has no past and no future?

What if the present moment just is?

What if the only truth you can know lies in the timeless present moment?

What if the present moment is always obscured by your mind?

What if your awareness could stand aside from your mind and be fully present?

What if you could Know Truth?

What if...

